seoulmama

Feb 7

URL: https://www.tumblr.com/seoulmama/807927639681744896/pattern-of-behavior

GIF by oneandlonley

Pattern of Behavior

Other Lies: Doxxing, Naturalist, and more!

(TW: Mentions of his old penname for search engine purposes. Discussions of mental health issues. Discussions of the dog and other related topics. Post 4 of ???) [Viewer Discretion is Advised]

Before I hop into the forbidden territory coming up in my next post or two, I thought I'd share some of the general lies I've found through Milo's own posts. The underlined words are linked content. FYI you can view TikTok accounts without having an account.

⚠️WARNING⚠️

I am going to be using screenshots with his irl first name in them in my next few posts. While they will be blurred out here, I am still going to link to those accounts where it's absolutely necessary.

Was He Doxxed?

Short answer? No.

While I'm not going to link you directly, I can say it's really not hard to find out his information through his TikToks and on his accounts on other platforms. He has crossposted on multiple accounts across multiple platforms linking them to each other. This is important information for my later posts pertaining to his service animal.

I've seen his "audradoesnotwrite" account comment on the World of Gardian page and that's actually how I found out he was following himself on different accounts. Unfortunately, I didn't bother to screenshot that account commenting on the WoG page at that time. He also has another page called "audradoesart". I can't link you to that page on TikTok because it's private. But let's take note of the usernames, my fellow scholars, Its important for later.

My point is, his accounts were all following each other, that's including the TikTok service animal page. And through his service animal page on TikTok, I was able to find his old twitter account. That is where he 100% funded his dog according to him. But, more on that in a bit, scholars.

He has a tendency to over share information, such as the actual names of places he is/has physically been in. Recently, he shared his location down to the city. Yet, even more recently he shared his IRL last name on his Tumblr page. For someone who has constantly claimed to have been doxxed, you'd think he'd be less a little flippant about his own safety.

Is okay to look into his past?

Generally, I'd say no.

However, this isn't a situation where I'm just looking because "I just don't like him" or that "I'm being petty." Quite honestly, I was going to ignore it after the initial wave of reviews. But after I really went through his TikToks, I started to realize there were many things that weren't adding up. On top of that, money has now become involved. There's no more fading into obscurity for Milo anymore.

That aside, I want to mention I have never, ever seen a person hide their service animal especially, one that worked so hard to get it across two platforms. Won't show his service animal but yet does use his mental health issues (in great detail, mind you) or disability to deflect criticism or support whatever narrative he wants.

You can't claim you want privacy when you supply us with unnecessary information unprompted like this.

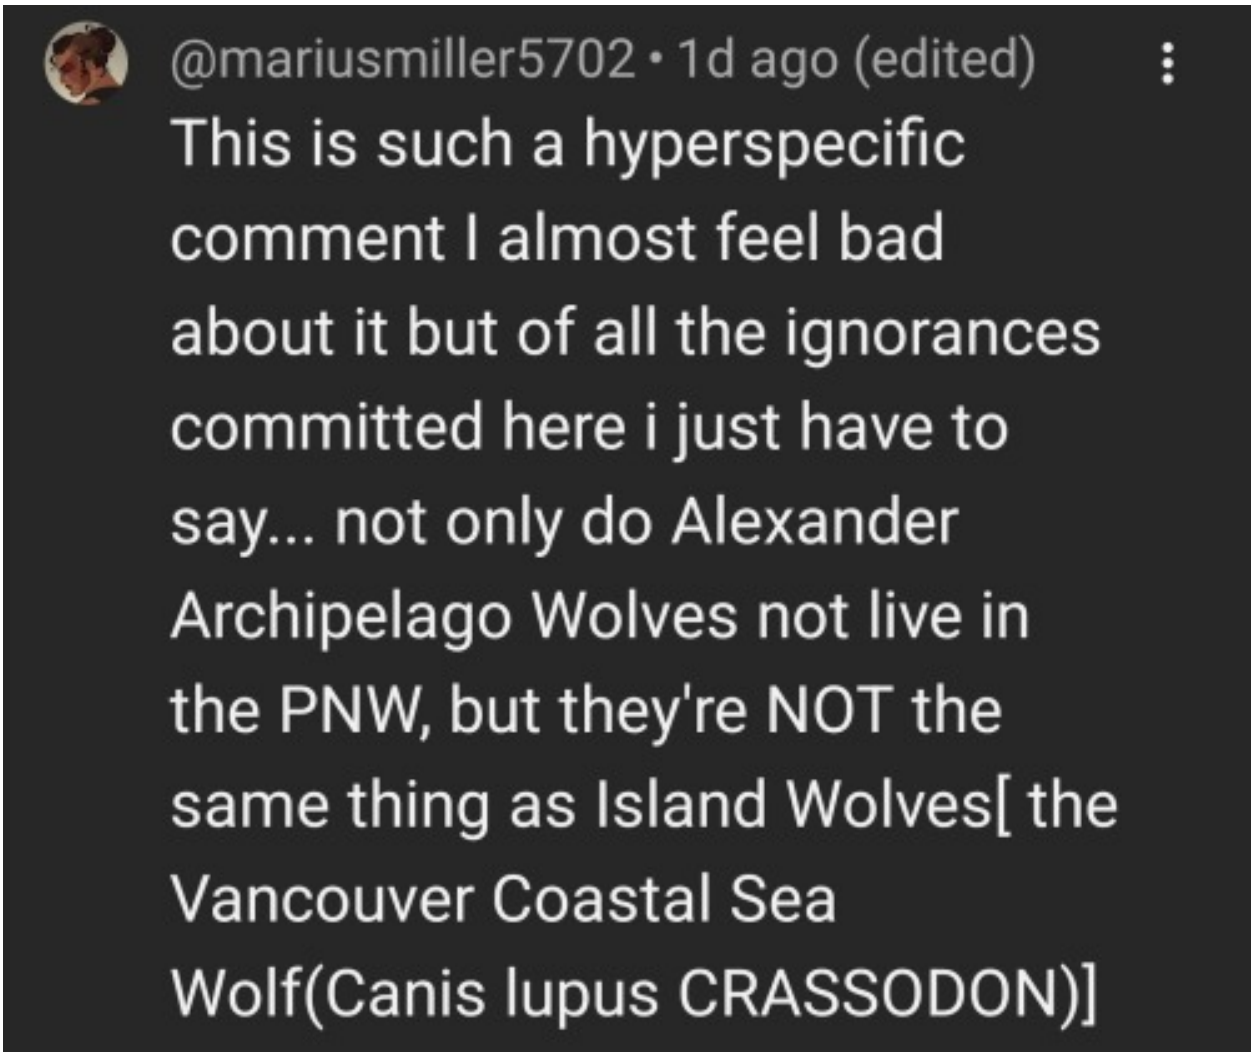
But friends, let us shelve this information for a bit later. You'll be most likely seeing this screenshot again, later, because his alleged college degree, work history, and service dog claims are intertwined with this.

Moving on, the "Disabled broke college student" claims were what made me curious about his own "crediationals." Especially, with how vague he sometimes is and how much the story keeps changing. So, lets check out one particular title he's told us he has.

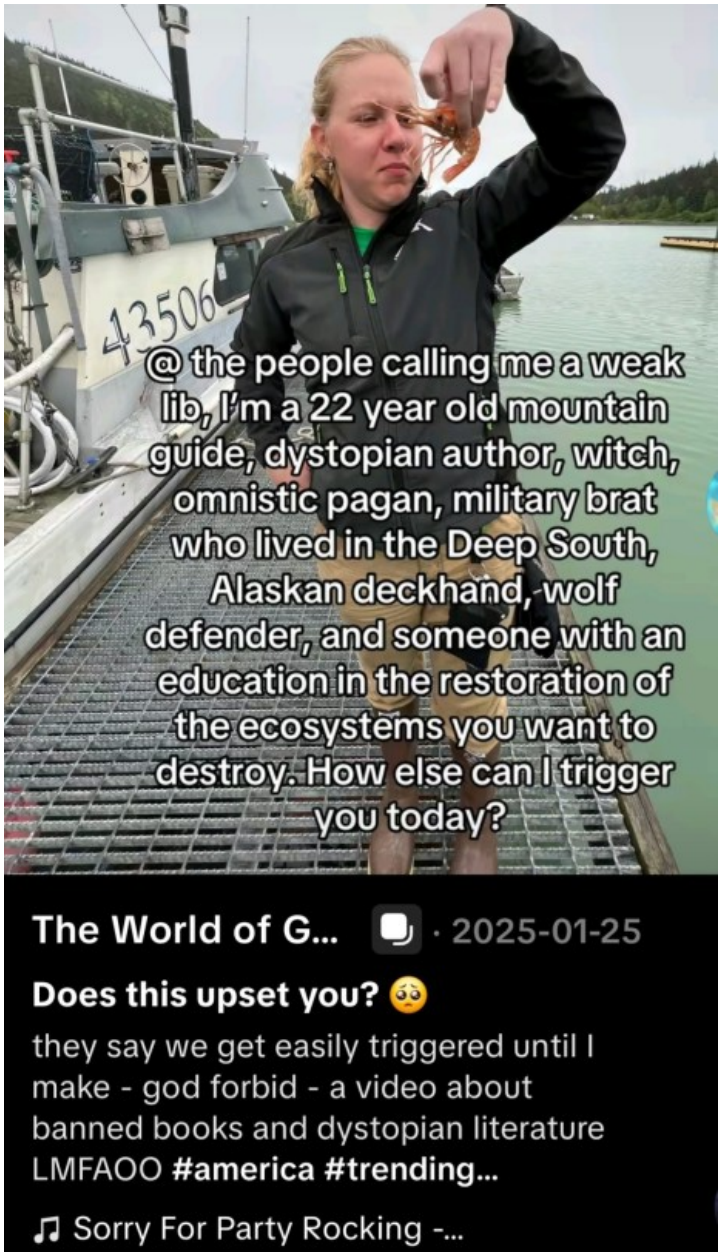
Is he a naturalist?

So first, what is a naturalist? Simply, a naturalist is someone who studies nature. They may or may not have a degree but most of them either study or teach nature in some formal sense. Its a wide field and it even includes fields that aren't necessarily in the wilderness, so it's extremely odd to label yourself that when you claim to have a forestry degree. Which he has claimed to have, an restoration ecology degree with a minor in creative writing, to support his writing and naturalist experience.

But here are some comments of people fact checking him:
An Alaskan person: (on this video, here).



What Milo has claimed about their Alaskan experience:



A few comments from people ecologicists/biologists, and/or any other environmental degrees:

(here)⬇️

Top Newest

@Smaestr • 1mo ago

5:58 There is not: I have a ecosystem science and sustainability degree, with an emphasis on resource management. The information about forestry in High Disturbance (other than getting how bad fire season was this in Colorado absurdly wrong) can be found in the first 4th of each trees' wikipedia page

(here)⬇️

@atlas-sharted • 1mo ago

i could be wrong, but i have an ecology degree and i have never once heard the term "naturalist" used to convey any kind of education or experience except when talking about historical figures. as far as i know it's a completely meaningless term. he may as well be calling himself a tree hugger with 100% sincerity 😂

Comments from people living in Colorado and Denver (too many to post): (here and here.)

I found plenty more comments from wildfire survivors and Native Americans who commented on the inaccurate historical and ecological information presented in "High Disturbance." I've also seen some comments under "Alterlife" videos but I feel discussions about his poetry are better suited for a technical breakdown, instead of this piece.

Also, the Neighborhood Friendly Artist, who has an actual environmental science degree, commented on the inaccurate information found in TAOS in her video, (here).

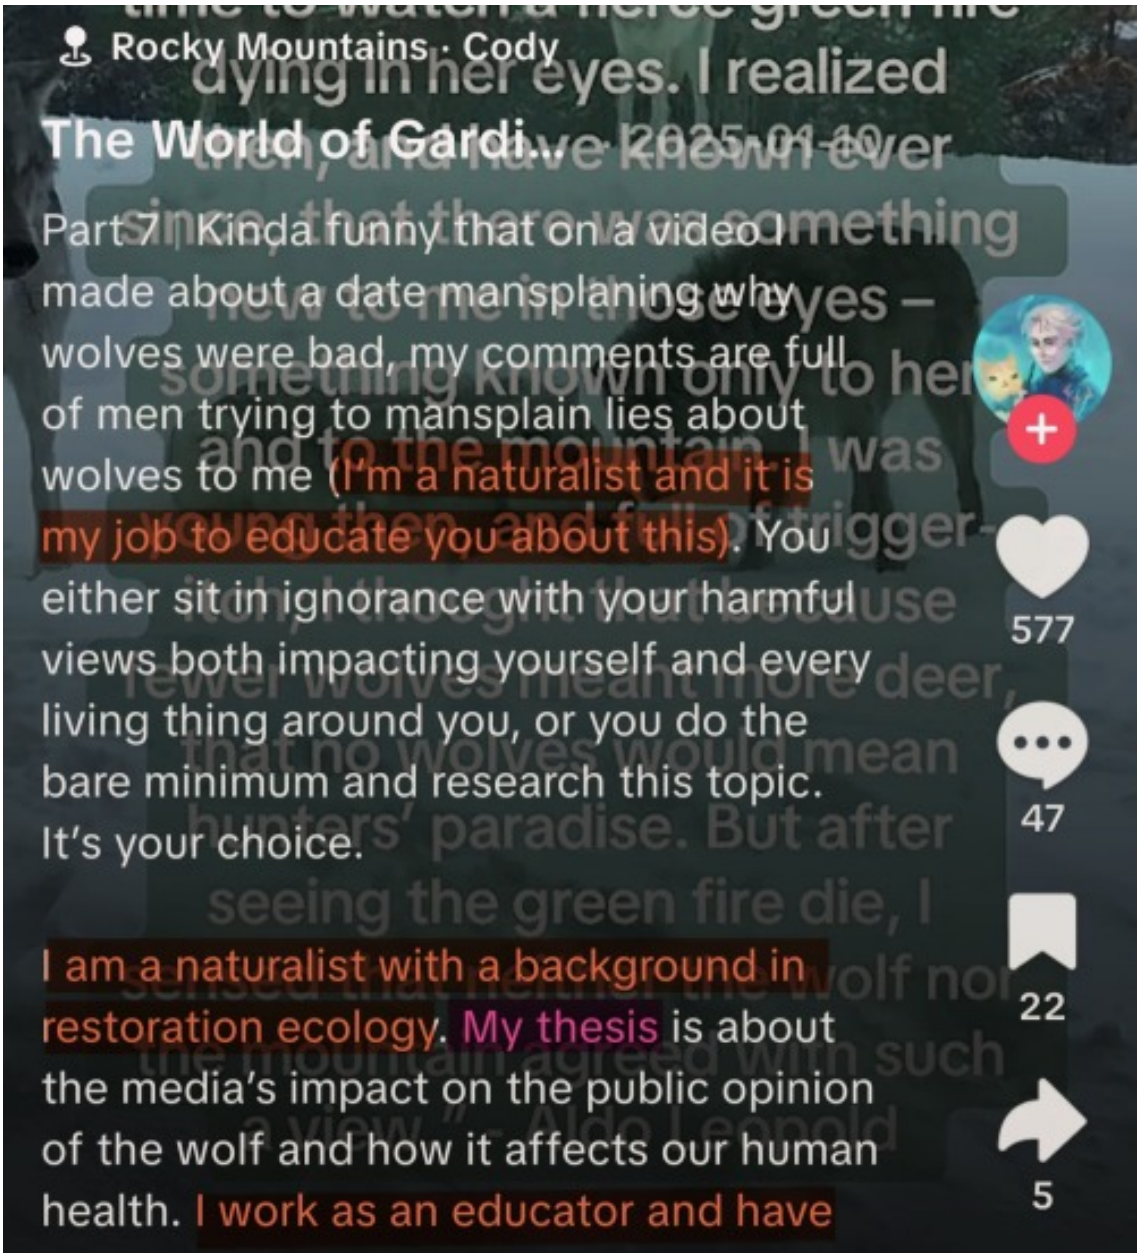
There were even more specific comments but I'm a bit too tired to go back and find them. Especially, since the comment sections under these videos are into the hundreds, if not thousands now.

So, why does Milo call himself a naturalist instead of an ecologicist?

I don't believe he actually has a degree. He's always been extremely vague about his degree and experience. Plus, he only uses phrases like "working through" when referring to his degree. Otherwise, he has only verbally claimed to have completed a creative writing minor.

But you can't have completed a minor without have completed a degree first.



The most important word in this picture is highlighted in pink. Let's remember, allegedly he has a bachelor's degree. Can you spot what's wrong here? But, yeah, we'll get into that in my next post.

🌟Next up: Pattern of Behavior Pt. III: College